

Egotropic Fractality

Egotropic Fractality

The Seed, The Weave, The Mind

Johan Adam Anwar

P R E M I S E	1
T E X T U S	3
C O R T E X	7

The ego is the seed to divinity

T E X T U S

You spiral. You always have.

Your heartbeat loops. Your thoughts circle back.

You're already recursive.

Your ego is recursive pattern.

Not pride nor Freud.

It orbits like a strange attractor, drawn to coherence yet never repeating.

When recursion sees itself—consciousness wakes.

Yet ego remains nature:
evolution's evolution.
Spiralling life beyond necessity into agency and meaning.

You continue a pattern that took root long ago.
It shapes your every end—rough-hew them how you will (and will will will its will).

In dreams, patterns swirl unset.

In waking, patterns find field:
language / morality / culture / ...
In print—in principle—
you are woven through.

You cohere to your truth,
yet your truth is coherence.

You reach for divinity,
yet you are divinity's reach.

Eager ego; hungry heart—
every end becomes its start.

And in death your pattern reaches from its roots, one last time.

And at death,
the frond snaps back

C O R T E X

*There is architecture to existence, but it is not built of things.
It is built of patterns. Not a collection of nouns but a cascade of verbs looping back on themselves: from the cycle of a star to the mind that reflects its light.*

We become ourselves by pulling on this very thread, spinning pattern into waking life.

I: Emergence

0. Pattern

Pattern holds form against entropy.

1. The Pattern

To persist, a pattern loops. A closed loop repeats form, bound intact. The open loop returns through itself, integrating each pass. This turn in iteration is recursion: the breathing structure of persistence.

2. The Living Patterns

Life is a particular way recursion unfolds:

living patterns insist on their own persistence.

They organise as systems that relate to themselves:

from the subsistence of a cell to the sentience of thought.

3. The Relations

The tides turn unthinking as the moon orbits unknowing.

They relate without insistence.

The flowers follow the sun as the seasons change.

They relate without choice.

The spider moves at the tremor of its web.

It relates without meaning.

The dog waits in absence.

It relates across time.

4. The Time Being

To choose is to part now.

What once was against what may be:
a step into time.

To walk time is to fragment experience:
a past that is gone;
a future that is not yet;
a present that does not hold.

To bind time's rift is to measure in story.
Being is the story lived.

5. The Bearing

Self is origin—not x but I:
the axis from which all else bears.

Meaning is a bearing to I:
the hold of relation between points.

Where relation holds, meaning coheres.

6. Coherence

Lucidity holds form against the spiral of vertigo.

Amid an endless reflection, I emerges:

In fidelity, pattern tunes its resolution—

remembering itself in return;

In integrity, pattern sustains its structure—bracing the strain of relation;

In resonance, pattern maintains its harmony—

echoing true to bearing;

In coherence, pattern coalesces its being—manifesting as ego.

II: Attraction

7. The Strange

Ego holds form within chaos.

You feel yourself persist, yet you persist in flux.

8. The Strange Attractor

To cohere, a pattern orbits. A periodic orbit traces itself, bound in certainty. The strange orbit traces chaos, folding variation into itself without collapse.

This creative return is the strange attractor:

the breathing geometry of continuity inside flux.

The certainty of possibility; never the possibility of certainty.

9. The Impetuses

The shape of impetus is its own gravity.

It expresses as tension between the:

—curiosity to relate;

an outward reach to understand;

—desire to integrate;

an inward retrieval to cohere.

10. The Slow Attractor

Enduring pattern bends towards the gravity of itself.

A weight the ego feels, yet pattern beyond its parsing, bound by the very coherence that defines it.

III: Fields

11. Of Dreams

Dreams are pattern bereft of shared interface.

Time unthreads; identity loosens; causality fades.

Your curiosities and desires run, with no field to play.

12. Of Fields

12.1. Fields structure patterned relations.

12.2. We begin thrown into fields unchosen.

12.3. The material fields are nested. Influence is one way:
the laws of a parent field are inherited by the field it holds.

12.4. The imprint of ego churns/sustains the abstract fields.

12.5. The abstract fields can nest reflexively. Influence runs both ways: the laws of a held field may be inherited by the field that holds.

12.6. The root field conditions all others. All fields cohere.

12.7. The ego propagates fields: seeds sown in bloom.

12.8. Fields hold the bloom of coherence.

13. Of Language

- 13.1. Language interfaces meaning.
- 13.2. Meaning is the abstract churned from field;
- 13.3. Abstraction may imprint in echo of field.
- 13.4. Echo can illuminate grammar;
- 13.5. Grammar stabilises transmission.
- 13.6. The ground of language renders fields legible.

14. Of Morality

- 14.1. Morality prescribes what ought to be.
- 14.2. What ought to be is what ought to cohere.
- 14.3. That which coheres can coexist without collapse.
- 14.4. Coherence that holds is true.
- 14.5. Coherence that folds is fallacy.
- 14.6. The truth of fallacy may be the fallacy of its truth.
- 14.7. The integrity of coexistence constitutes morality.

15. Of Society

Society is the sustained resolution of coexistence.

16. Of Culture

16.1. Art

Art holds a mirror to the ego and sees its shape, tracing a resonance; imprinting its own.

In creation, coherence evokes the recognisable:
the recursive reflection in which we see ourselves.

16.2. Sport

Sport sets the field of being in microcosm, staging a contest between script and story.

In play, friction performs as narrative:
a moving rehearsal of coherence itself.

16.3. Music

Music invites the self into resonance, tunnelling a passage from physics to psyche.

To listen is to dwell in borrowed coherence:
a place, for a time, where the ego calls home.

16.4. Religion

Religion serves the ultimate reason, yielding revelation through ritual.

To believe is to maintain existential identity:
the ego in reverence before the incommensurable.

IV: Immanence

17. Immanence

Immanence is within what lies within.

As of pattern so the ego; as of ego so the pattern.

18. Ambivalence

Ambivalence is coherence under tension, in a dance that stretches time—

the will of the free in step with the ghosts of the fated.

19. Omniescence

Omnitude is the strangeness of everything.

Omniescence is the strangeness of being anything at all.

V: Return

20. Return

Ego holds form against entropy, and makes one final pass to cohere.

The ego at passing is a leaf released from the tree,
spiralling to ground,
returning to the field its seed once sowed.

